COMPREHENSION SKILLS

Q.II. Read the following passage and answer the questions below it: (10)

Laxmidhar, a wealthy man, was living in a town Kundinpur. He had a good business and was earning a lot of money. But alas! He was extremely selfish and mean and would not part with money even for a good cause. However, his wife Bhagyamati and son Anand were kind-hearted souls. One day at night he had a very unusual dream. He saw in the dream that he had died of heart attack and after death he approached the gates of Heaven expecting an admission over there. The two gatekeepers challenged him and asked why he should deserve admission. He was taken aback. He explained to them that he was a rich and powerful man. But they asked him clearly what good deeds he had done to deserve admission. Laxmidhar recalled after some time that he had given two coins to his housemaid Taramati after she begged for it days together. Taramati was in great crisis as she had lost her husband. On another occasion, he had given one coin to a boy named Sadanand. Sadanand was the son of one of his retired employees, Sampat. Sampat was seriously ill. He was badly in need of money.

P.T.O.

Laxmidhar proudly narrated these deeds to the gate-keepers. They asked him to wait for the decision and passed on this information to Chitragupta. Pat came the reply, "Give him his three coins and ask him to go to Hell." Laxmidhar cried out, "No! No." His dream had vanished. He was shocked and afraid. After some time he calmed down and thought for himself. He had learnt a lesson. From the next morning, people saw a different Laxmidhar who was kind, considerate and helpful. They were pleased and so was Laxmidhar. He then led a full and happy life.
